Evolutionary, in order to survive, the men had to possess appropriate resources, not only material but also those resulting from their nature and culture of the group in which they were inscribed. Together with the development of the civilisation, people wanted to own more and more, and consumption began to fulfil new functions organising social and institutional life and interpersonal relations. In the contemporary mercantile world, old ideas gain new meaning, and social and humanistic studies face new challenges. Aims and values, autotelic values are used to realise precisely specified aims. The leading subject of this year conference from the series “Values, ideal, emotions in words and pictures” will be the man in mercantile world. We would like this conference to be the opportunity for deep analysis of the phenomenon of mercantilism in the field of style of life, business as well as nurture, education and re-education.

We kindly invite you to participate in the academic meeting with the hope for interesting and fruitful sessions.
